

NCO Corner

By CSM R.K.A Price

"Sergeant, give me a by name report of the location and activity of every soldier assigned to your section." Do all of you noncommissioned officers know where every one of your soldiers are, right now? Do all of you know precisely what they are doing? Or, did you merely tell them to "go to the motor pool and pull maintenance, and if you don't get it done I'll have a portion of your anatomy," while you continued to do something else in the company area?

Every NCO in the brigade should have answered Yes to questions one and two and NO to question three. What was your score, all three answers correct? They should have been, but I don't think thats true in all cases. Two out of three might be alright for the 250th Underground Mop and Toilet Brush Repair Battalion, but its not alright in any of the battalions in this brigade.

If you missed any of these questions you have a major problem with control, supervision, planning of your daily activity and you are more than likely not accomplishing your mission. And your soldiers are not receiving the training they require or the care they deserve.

If you want to learn more about NCO Business make sure you attend your units next Noncommissioned Officer Professional Development class. Your company first sergeant and battalion CSM have the answers to all your questions. Until next time, continue to march.

Sergeant Major of the Army coming

The highest ranking enlisted man in the U. S. Army is scheduled to visit the 22nd Signal Brigade this month according to MSgt Emmanuel Bible, V Corps Public Affairs Supervisor.

Bible said SMA William A. Connelly will arrive in Europe during the Easter weekend and is scheduled to visit units throughout Germany, including the 22nd Signal Brigade around the middle of April.

440th Signal soldiers takes top honors

By 2nd Lt.Gail Grant

Two soldiers of the 440th Signal Battalion have been selected the 22nd Signal Brigade Noncommissioned Officer, and Soldier of the Quarter. The NCO honor went to 34 year-old SSgt Lance P. Trowbridge, HHC, 440th, who works in the Signal Operations Platoon.

A leader in the 440th said, "Trowbridge's ability to articulate difficult military subjects should be credited to his dedication to the Armed Forces."

The Brigade Soldier of the Quarter selected was Sp4 Robert Sheffield, a shop foreman in the Company C, 440th motor pool. Superiors said of Sheffield, "Under the stress of an ever moving unit, he was able to enhance his qualities as a professional soldier".
