Black Forest - a wonderland

By Charles Rollins

What did you think Germany was going to be like before you boarded the plane for the trip "across the pond"? Did visions of Rhine castles, medieval cottages, and festivals dance through your mind? How about the Black Forest? The reality of Army life in Germany may be different from what you imagined, but the magic Black Forest is everything you imagined and more.

The Schwarzwald, which stretches northward from the Swiss border to Karlsruhe and west from the Rhine River to the Bodensee, is not really dark or sinister. It is dark under the towering evergreens that cloak the mountains, but the forest is not unbroken. There are lush green valleys, quaint towns, and rustic little farms.

The area is easily reached by car or train and is full of interesting places.

Another city which should not be missed is Freiburg, the capital of the Black Forest. Situated on the road linking the Rhine and Danube valleys, the 850-year-old city boasts the only massive gothic tower in Germany finished during the middle ages.

This is the Germany you dreamed about. Enjoy! (Capt. Rollins is the Public Information Officer for the 3rd Support Command).
